Legal Update of Recent Ninth Circuit Court Decisions

Every year brings new and important case law related to the education of students with disabilities. In this fast-paced presentation, Jan Tomsy offers an overview of the most recent decisions issued by the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals concerning issues related to special education. You will receive an analysis of the facts and the court's rationale for each decision, as well as the practical implications of the case for all educators.

Presenter Biography: Jan E. Tomsy

Jan E. Tomsy is a partner and based out of Fagen Friedman & Fulfrosts' Oakland office. She has had decades of experience and an extensive practice involving student matters, with a particular emphasis in special education and student discipline. Jan's expertise in special education matters has helped scores of districts to address issues and resolve disputes in this specialized field. She has had significant success representing school district clients in mediations and due process hearings, as well as in special education-related litigation in state and federal courts including the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals. Jan also is a frequent presenter on special education topics in a variety of settings, ranging from workshops provided to a single district, to presentations at statewide professional conferences across the county and at national conferences, as a keynote speaker.

Jan earned her Master's degree in education (with an emphasis in student development and special education) from Dominican University, and her J.D. from U.C. Berkeley School of Law.
